'This charming establishment, with its refined and entertaining noveities, has proved of inte how much can be accompished by judicious tasts and a correct appreciation of what a light and cheeruit performance ought to be. The programme last night, for instance, was replete with all the elements that could possibly contribute to the gratification and wonder of the fashionable assemblage that filled the house. Laughable sketches, in which arists of genume merit take part, songs and characteristic dances by performers long and laworably known to the public; comicalities without number, well calculated to please, but never to aftend, combine to render the entertainment, as a whole, the best ever given in this city."

Mr. Hart appreciates the true mission of the vaudeville stage. It is to present a series of bright and pleasing skeriches, which, if they do not always instruct, amuse in the highest degree. This city has long needed such a theatre, and, until the Theatre Comique turned its attention to presenting, in addition to sharp larces, light dramas and missical and minstrel sketches, the values it light among specialty he performances at the Comique are chaste and refined. We make this statement only airer having sat out an entire but and witnessed every feature on it. It is just what the management term it, "a legitimate variety theatre" and a resort for ladies and children.
